

APNFO 15

The 15th Asia-Pacific Conference on Near-Field Optics

Since the past three decades, the optics interaction with matter at nanometer scale attracted the attentions of scientists worldwide, especially in the direction of higher resolution over optical diffraction limits. Hence, a new research field: Near-field Optics was born. After the initial focus on developments of the instrumentations of higher optical resolution and spectroscopy, and the basic theory of near-field optics, the research direction moves to the wider areas of some basic physical excitations, such as plasmonics and application to the IT industry, biology and medicine.

The Asia-Pacific Conference on Near-field Optics (APNFO) has provided an opportunity for well-known scientists and young researchers in the Asia-Pacific Region to sit together face-to-face to discuss the latest developments of theories and cutting-edge instrumentation.
